THE NORTH portion of Fremont is appealing to the eye, because of green islands in the center of the road and underground utilities.

City ponders what to do with south Fremont Blvd.

Seaside merchants gave the city a piece of their mind on what to do with the south end of Fremont Boulevard in a special public hearing last week in city hall.

The general thrust of their comments was : please don't do what you did on the north end of Fremont. The merchants specifically objected to elimination of on-street parking, and channelization, which they claim has impaired their business.

The meeting was called by the city council to solicit ideas and suggestions from the community on the development of a plan for south Fremont. City Mgr. Dudley Lapham explained to the group of about 50 persons that no plan has yet been adopted, although there are funds budgeted for some type of improvements.

Lapham, in response to a question from the floor, said there is a possibility that some of the federal funds available for the improvement of south Fremont Boulevard might be lost, or applied to some other project such as Del Monte Boulevard, if a plan is not adopted and implemented.

The city has hired a consulting firm to conduct a complete analysis of traffic, parking, and related uses on the south end of Fremont, before any plan is adopted, to collect data and to suggest possible alternatives.

Lapham said "improvement" of the south Fremont area could mean painting, channelization, signalization, left turn lanes, or any combination of things agreed upon by the community and city. Once the analysis of existing conditions is made this fall, some type of preliminary plan will be drawn up, probably within a couple of months, Lapham indicated.

Chris Kinzel, a partner of the consulting firm in Walnut Creek hired to conduct the study, said information has been gathered in Seaside for the last three or four weeks, but no

Parents Anonymous forms local chapter

When parents are distressed, children sometimes prove to be a convenient scapegoat, so that, gradually and often without the parent's awareness, verbal and physical abuse can become a cycle in the family.

The child who is thus abused very often abuses his children, and so on, in a chain linking the present all the way to Adam and Eve, in a web of self-destruction and self-defeat.

Until recently, there was no remedy for this peculiar cycle except the courts, after the abuse had gone past all reasonable points at which it could have been controlled, and separation of child and parent was the only alternative.

But now there's an organization designed to help the abusing parent out of his or her bad habits. It's called Parents Anonymous, and a local chapter is being organized on the Monterey Peninsula by Michael MacPherson, a counselor with the Community Counseling Center, formerly known as Aquarian House.

Structured nominally and loosely along the lines of Alcoholics Anonymous, the organization is a self-help approach to the problems of child abuse where the social stigma attached to being an abuser is lifted, and where anonymity permits free and frank discussion of mutual problems.

The core of the Parents Anonymous organization is the weekly meeting, at which parents share their experiences and help to reinforce each other in their determination and growing skill at handling crises which had led them in the past into patterns of child abuse.

The first such organizational meeting on the Monterey Peninsula was held last week, and more will be held regularly until the organization becomes functional, MacPherson said. Past experience in other areas indicates that it may take several weeks or months to build the membership, but once the parents realize there is help for them, and when they understand that anonymity is protected, the group begins to function effectively.

That child abuse is an ever-present problem in our society, and one which is practically a taboo subject for discussion, is attested to by the fact that Parents Anonymous has undergone a tremendous growth in membership since it was started in 1970 by a 29-year-old mother who goes by the name of Jolly K. There are 15,000 members in the United States and Canada.

With a base in Inglewood that serves as headquarters, Parents Anonymous operates along lines similar to Alcoholics Anonymous, with its insistence upon regular attendance at meetings, and the need for regular and constant self-appraisal and growth.

The philosophy of P.A. is best expressed in one statement from a handbook distributed by the organization to new and prospective parent members:

"Traditional therapy generally is like a gentle, slow approach that usually includes lengthy probing of one's past. This approach can be most beneficial in gaining insights into the whys and wherefores of one's present feelings and behavior.

"It is for this very reason that P.A. staunchly supports not only the use of P.A. group but also private therapy for those members who may want to go further. P.A.'s method basically tends to deal with present symptoms, problems, loss of control. We offer positive behavior alternatives to offset the destructive results of present behavior patterns. Ours is a do-it-now approach to help build self-esteem, self-confidence, self-image, self-control, self-awareness, with the goal of instilling mature self-government of our day-to-day behavior."

The varieties of child abuse identified by the organization are: physical abuse, physical neglect, sexual abuse, verbal

Annexation proposal is defeated by adamant city council members

Seaside Mayor B.J. Dolan's proposed annexation of Seaside to Monterey was dealt a stunning death blow by the other four members of the city council last week.

The other councilmen all voiced heated, almost passionate, opposition to the plan which Dolan first suggested a week ago. All said Dolan had acted prematurely in asking that the measure be put on the March 2 general election ballot for an advisory "straw vote" and that it would not be politically or administratively feasible.

A motion by Dolan to place the proposal on the ballot to enable Seaside voters to express their opinions died for lack of a second.

"I first came to Seaside in 1946, and became the president of the Chamber of Commerce in 1954, and I worked for incorporation," said Councilman Joe Cota. "My whole life has been spent in what I've come to think of as my city.

"To hand over my city to another city is unthinkable, in my mind. I don't believe bigness is necessarily cheaper, and I don't intend to support the straw ballot. This proposal doesn't have enough merit to even go to a straw ballot."

Councilman Steve Ross said he would never allow the identity and integrity of the Seaside community to be compromised.

"I'm not one who will, for strictly economic reasons, abandon a commitment to the people of the community," Ross said. "The two communities are different, and their philosophies and traditions are different. Because we were elected as city fathers does not give us the right to hand our sovereignty over to other cities.

"The mere size of a city does not, in itself, create an economic entity," Ross said. "The new city would have to have new studies and new surveys, which would cost the taxpayer."

Councilman Glenn Olea said he could not support the idea either.

"The people in Seaside are concerned about self-government, and I can't turn my back on them," Olea said. "Seaside is a melting pot, with people from all over the world, and we have a lot of different problems from Monterey."

Councilman Oscar Lawson said the proposal might, if effected, result in a "step-child status" for Seaside.

"The only way the interests of Seaside could be served by such a proposal would be in the consolidation of all the cities of their services," Lawson said. "A piecemeal approach is not worthy of consideration. There are too many unknowns in this proposal. I strongly oppose this."

In another matter, the city council failed to approve an affirmative action plan as recommended by Councilman Steve Ross. The council had studied the proposal for several weeks, and had gathered considerable material from other agencies on aspects of affirmative action programs.

Before the council considered the resolution that would have established the affirmative action program, City Mgr. Dudley Lapham read a tentative budget for implementation of the program that envisioned a $16,000 a year position for an affirmative action officer, as well as other costs for an annual expenditure of $33,240.

Councilman Ross had suggested that, since the 1975-76 budget is already adopted, there be no additional funds allocated for the program in its first year of operation, and that it be administered by the city manager's office.

Councilman Joe Cota said he would like to hold a public hearing on the social element of the city's general plan before deciding on any sort of affirmative action program, since any costs of such an undertaking might be underwritten by that aspect of the budget.

At previous council meetings, the thrust of comments by some councilmen was that the city had always hired on an equal opportunity basis, and that administrative expenses of an affirmative action program were not justified.

Councilman Oscar Lawson reminded his fellow council members that the city has an obligation to have an ongoing affirmative action program for federally-funded projects, and that Ross's suggestion was intended to protect the city against possible legal action on that basis.

"I'm concerned about the use of the taxpayer's money," said Councilman Glenn Olea. "I feel this could be implemented without taxpayers' funds. I disagree with the taxpayers' money being used to implement this program."

"I don't think we can justify hiring two individuals to implement the philosophies we've already been doing," commented Mayor B. J. Dolan.

A motion to approve the program was defeated by the no votes of Dolan, Cota, and Olea, to the yes votes of Ross and Lawson.

The council also heard more complaints from a resident of the Highland Park area who had registered their discontent at a previous council meeting over loitering and misbehaving youth in and around the park.

The Seaside woman who addressed the council declined to give her name or address, for fear of some sort of retaliation. But she pleaded with the council to put an end to "harassment and terrorism" in the city.

She said she received a telephone call from her daughter one night while she was at work in Salinas, asking for help because two youths were pounding on the front door so hard the house was shaking. She was too terrorized to call 911.

"This is not an isolated incident. I've lived in my house five years, and in those five years I've had five major property damages. We have a class of people in this town who seem to be running things...we are made prisoners in our own homes.

"There are hoodlums in this town and nothing is being done about it. There will be no law-abiding, tax-paying citizens in this town if something is not done. And there won't be any whites left, either. Something has got to be done. I can't live like this, and I can't afford to go anywhere else."

Mayor Dolan assured the woman that special police enforcement is being garnered in the area, and that the problems residents are experiencing related to the park and juvenile offenders are being brought under control.

The council received a preliminary report on the city's housing conservation program, which is intended to develop a policy for the conservation of the housing stock in Seaside through systematic survey and rehabilitation of residential units.

Rehabilitation loans may be granted under the program to home owner in the city whose home is deficient in relationship to housing standards. The plan declares 4,166 of the city's 7,076 dwelling units to be suitable for conservation purposes.

The future of Fremont

(Editorial)

The formulation of a plan for the upgrading and redevelopment of the south end of Fremont Boulevard is an important milestone in the progress of Seaside.

That main artery into the city has suffered for years because of its construction as a state highway (Route 1) and subsequent reversion to the city for maintenance. Now, after the city is built and almost totally developed, Seaside at last has the opportunity to redesign its main business street to conform to its present-day use.

It's a golden opportunity to make Fremont Boulevard not only a major access route to businesses, which depend on it for their survival, but to beautify and add grace to the city.

The gist of comments received by the city staff at a special hearing held last week in city hall on what to do with south Fremont was that merchants didn't want the same kind of treatment accorded north Fremont to be extended south.

But there was precious little offered, either from the business people on Fremont, or from residents of Seaside, about what should be done in a positive vein to improve what is, by anyone's definition, both a traffic and pedestrian hazard area.

Slow the traffic, said some merchants. Put in traffic lights, said others. Don't do anything, said still others.

Having heard from the businessmen who bothered to show up for the hearing the city will take the first steps in drawing a preliminary plan for south Fremont, which will go through more deliberations at the planning commission and city council level before anything is done to alter the roadway.

It should be evident that everyone in Seaside has a vested interest in what happens with the south end of Fremont. Certainly, the businessmen there are the most likely to make their views known first, since their livelihood is at stake.

And it's probably true that the timing on the improvements to the north end of Fremont was bad, and that a little more foresight on the part of the city might have earned the good will of those merchants there who had to put up with heavy construction equipment during the Christmas shopping season.

But the residents of Seaside, of which there are more than there are businessmen, must also have their say on the matter. What do the people who live in Seaside, and who use Fremont every day to get to and from work and shopping, think should be done with the other end of Fremont Boulevard?

The question of esthetics, whenever raised in this sort of context, invariably ends up being tossed aside as a frivolous and superficial concern, compared to the awesome responsibility of keeping a business above matter. Maybe there are those in the community who have a higher priority on beautification of south Fremont than those whose voices have already been heard.

Again, Seaside might not want to be like Carmel, but it's hard to argue that lots of trees, a mish-mash traffic pattern, and a lack of parking have hurt business in Carmel. Something to think about.

In any event, it's time for everyone who cares about Seaside to make his or her views known in the formulation of the Fremont plan. (R.M.)

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

Was it not a poet who startled the world with the truth that: "a rose is a rose is a rose?" Perhaps fame such as came to her will escape me for my utterance but I must declare: "Mayor Dolan's suggestion makes sense, makes sense, makes sense."

Surely - by now - everyone who is literate and reads the press knows about Seaside's Mayor coming out for a study of the feasibility of uniting the city with the city of Monterey. Is it not a good idea? Could it not result in more efficient services for the people of both communities, avoiding unnecessary duplication?

Further, could it not be an impetus to get other towns on the peninsula to study the advantage of all being part of one peninsula city? There could be in such a city some arrangement for each community to have a say in what they desire for their area.

Whenever such an idea of getting together into one town is suggested, naturally some voices will come out unreasonably in opposition. Who is not aware that some folks detest any change for the better? The first man who put on clothes was undoubtedly condemned by those who preferred to freeze. The first one who declared: "Hey, individualists of the jungle, let's combine into a tribe for our mutual advantage," must have gotten dirty looks.

Some of the critics, of Mayor Dolan's idea, shout: "It's politics! That's why he came out with the suggestion." Well, if it's politics, it's mighty good politics. It does make sense. Usually some city officials and employees oppose all suggestions for uniting with other cities because they fear they will lose their positions. Naturally, there will be an economy realized since not all will be needed in a unified city. But government should exist for the good of the public - all the people - not just politicians and employees of the public. All the people pay the bills of government. The public wants efficient and less costly government when possible.

If Mayor Dolan's suggestion is "politics," why do not more officials play the game likewise and prove that they are not only interested in their own security but what is best for all citizens?

A remembrance of things past

TWENTY YEARS AGO
From the Seaside News-Sentinel
Oct. 13, 1955

Opposing Factions Reveal New Blasts in Recall War
With less than two weeks remaining before the Oct. 24 recall election, Seaside's warring political factions stepped up the electioneering tempo this week.

Both sides—advocates of Councilmen Pollock and the "Citizens Committee for Good Government" formed to oppose the proposed recall of Councilmen Cota, Craige and Mayor Oldemeyer—availed themselves of the News-Sentinel's offer to publish their respective views.

Published below are the statements from each group. Writing in behalf of the "Citizens" organization is Ruth Speakman, chairman of the group.

The statement in behalf of Pollock is signed by three men who originally demanded the recall of Oldemeyer, Cota, and Craige—Herman S. Nielsen, Harold E. Clark, and D.R. Blackley.

Ironically, Nielsen also issued a statement of his own in which he deplores "certain" of Pollock's "political allies." He says, however, that he is supporting Pollock.

With Pollock's attempt to have his name stricken from the recall ballot thrown out last week by the Superior Court in Salinas, the election will involve all members of the city council except George "Sarge" Cunningham.

Statement Issued on Behalf of Councilman Pollock
Good government is a government that protects its subjects and is responsive to the will and sympathetic toward the problems of the people it governs.

Good government does not legislate in behalf of any faction and is not vindictive in its thinking or approach to any problem of toward any citizen.

Good government, in a democratic society, aids and assists its subjects and does not write repressive and restrictive legislation designed to give one person an unfair advantage over another.

Good government, like good business, must have managers that will get along with employees. A successful business must gear itself to local conditions. We can not live in Seaside and devote our time and energies to the protection of interests outside our city which are opposed to the orderly and progressive development of Seaside.

Statement Issues on Behalf of Mayor, Craige, Cota
In the midst of all this tumult and shouting to recall the Seaside City Council, reasonable people are asking themselves many questions, some of which they can find answers to, some not.

Who started this recall movement which is costing city taxpayers some $1,500 for an election Oct. 24? The obvious answer to that one is that James Ogle and James Patterson started the recall.

Last spring, taking advantage of the motion to license Harold Clark's auction yard as a cause celebre they invited voters down to their empty store building called Democratic headquarters to sign recall petitions against Mayor Jack Oldemeyer and Councilmen John Craige and Joe Cota. After several months of intensive effort, they were able to qualify these petitions.

Who are Ogle and Patterson? What is their work or business? Are they responsible, sincere men whose judgement and motivation we can trust?

Most people in Seaside can answer these questions. James Ogle is best known in sporting circles, and has only taken an interest in city politics since and during incorporation. Patterson has been active around the Peninsula for years. He is a brilliant speaker. Both are men of considerable leisure.

If they succeed in recalling our mayor and the two councilmen (for they are opposed to the recall of Mr. Pollock), whom would they propose as appointees or candidates to fill the vacancies?

Western Atmosphere Picked as Theme For Seaside's First Birthday Party

Although today, Oct. 13, is the official anniversary of Seaside's first year as a city, Oct. 15 is the night, to remember for the celebration which accompanies the city's first birthday.

The latter date, Saturday, was chosen as more appropriate because it will give everyone plenty of time to rest before and after the festivities.

The celebration will officially begin at 8 p.m. Saturday and will end at 1 a.m. Sunday. Every citizen of Seaside is invited to the affair, which is being sponsored by the Seaside Chamber of Commerce.

Any interested friends of Seaside are also welcome for the buffet supper of cold cuts and tap beer which will be offered in quantity.

Councilman Joe Cota, who donated his warehouse at Seventh and Cypress for the anniversary party, says he expects from 200 to 500 people to attend.

The "theme" of the evening will be "Harvest-Western," so says Fred Mitchell, president of the Chamber of Commerce. He says the warehouse will be decorated with corn stalks and streamers to add to the general atmosphere. Western attire is preferable for the evening, but anyone suitable dressed for the occasion will be admitted.

Door prizes of radios and electric shavers will be presented to lucky celebrants, says Mitchell.

Circulation At Library Down to 1,707

Circulation of books at the Emerson Branch Library, Fourth and Elm streets in Seaside, dropped slightly during September.

Total circulation was 1,331 volumes. Circulation in August totaled 1,707, the last month of the summer vacation. A drop is normally expected when parents and students shift gears to get the school year underway.

Panama Canal question to be discussed at MPC

The role of the United States in the operation of the Panama Canal is the topic of a "Forum on the Panama Canal Question" which will have Ambassador John C. Mundt, U.S. representative in the present treaty negotiations, as a special guest panelist.

The forum will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 30, in the USO Building in Monterey and is being co-sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Branch of the American Association of University Women and Monterey Peninsula College.

Since July, 1971, Mundt has been a member of the negotiating team exploring the many sensitive issues involved with renewing the Panama Canal treaty. He is presently the state director of the community college system in the state of Washington, and has high credentials in Latin American economics and history and comparative and international law.

Joining Mundt in panel discussions will be LCDR, John Brennan, a member of the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School faculty whose field of expertise is defense resource management; Yolanda Bellisimo, professor of Latin American Studies at the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies, who will discuss the effect of the Panama Canal on other countries and oceanographer Kenneth Jukowski, a NPGS staff-member at the Navy's Fleet Weather Central. He will provide background information on the Panama Canal and how the United States became involved in the issues now under study.

The program will be moderated by Marcia Raines, a member of the local AAUW who lived in the Panama Canal Zone from 1971-75 where she taught school.

Both pro and con elements of the Panama Canal Question will be discussed. The Panama Canal was constructed with massive amounts of U.S. money and was opened for use in 1914. It has been under U.S. sovereignty since then. Some of the "pro" elements in the Panama Canal Question state that a new treaty based on partnership with Panama would enable the U.S. to devote all of its energies to the efficient operation of the waterway.

A new treaty would also demonstrate the possibility of resolving problems when they are susceptible to accommodation and compromise, rather than waiting until they raise the danger of confrontation and possible use of military force.

The "con" issues: include the thesis that world shipping would be in the hands of a dictator, and selective use of the canal would undermine U.S. security.

Irish artist exhibits paintings in Seaside City Hall

By LISA LEDIN

Gilbert Boyd, a robust Irishman whose art is presently exhibited at Seaside City Hall, paints in luminous color from memories that reflect a multi-faceted past. He started his painting after World War II for recreation, and as a result carved a new future for himself.

Boyd graduated from the Belfast Technical College in mechanical engineering, and then proceeded through a variety of careers and hobbies. From a World War I British Army soldier to a top executive position with the Revere Copper and Brass Corp. in Chicago, Boyd has also been a baritone soloist, dramatist, teacher, machine designer, and a successful painter.

He has studied art in Paris, at St. Ives art colony in Cornwall, England, and has traveled extensively. Boy is a valuable source on the subject of Ireland, his native land.

In December of 1974, Boyd wrote an article explaining his interpretation of the Irish struggle that persists between the Catholics and Protestants. Few people understand the seemingly insoluble war, but Boyd has a degree of objectivity from having lived both in Ireland and the U.S. that clears some of the fog.

Boyd blamed Henry VIII for laying a foundation for the continuing troubles.

"When Henry VIII of England, a Roman Catholic, changed his religion to become a Protestant for his own personal desires and imposed it on the Irish 441 years ago, he created a religious nuisance that is still an irritating, even deadly nuisance in Ulster today," Boyd said.

To lay the blame on Henry VIII is an unusual attack, and one that has not been popularly used.

"Henry VIII tried to keep Ireland as protection against invasions by the French and Spaniards. He sent loyal Protestant courtiers to Ireland to take over territory for large estates and castles.

His daughter, Elizabeth, when she became queen divided more of Ireland's richest lands and gave them as gifts to her court favorites. Over a number of years these so-called Anglo-Irish lords and ladies built magnificent castles and rock houses, making the native Irish their lowly servants.

During these years of oppression under the yoke of the Anglo-Irish landlords, the Irish peasants were organizing a rebellion and developing revenge on these invading tyrants.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army (the IRA), in seclusion in South Ireland, saw an opportunity, not to fight for religious freedom, but to get the British out of Ulster. The IRA infiltrated into Ulster among the Catholics and started the present guerrilla type of warfare to force Ulster into surrendering and agreeing to a united Ireland, Boyd said.

To this day, Protestant domination has created deepening grievances, discriminatory policies in jobs, housing and politics.

When asked today for a formula or some sort of Irish solution, Boyd answered:

"It has to start with the children. Why segregate little children...for they will be the powers later on?"

He drew a parallel between the problems of class hatred and religious prejudice in Ireland with the race discrimination in America.

"Whether we be yellow, black or green, early acceptance among the children is a necessary ingredient. I cannot state it more vividly: the problem is utter ignorance. You cannot teach hatred day after day and expect any kind of harmony.

"And what chance is there for a change when Orangemen parade each year, opening up old sores?"

The division deepens. Catholic children attend Catholic schools and are taught Irish history. Protestant children attend Protestant schools and are taught British history. Each has its own playgrounds and they don't socialize. As Protestant child growing up in Northern Ireland, Boyd was taught that Catholics could not be trusted.

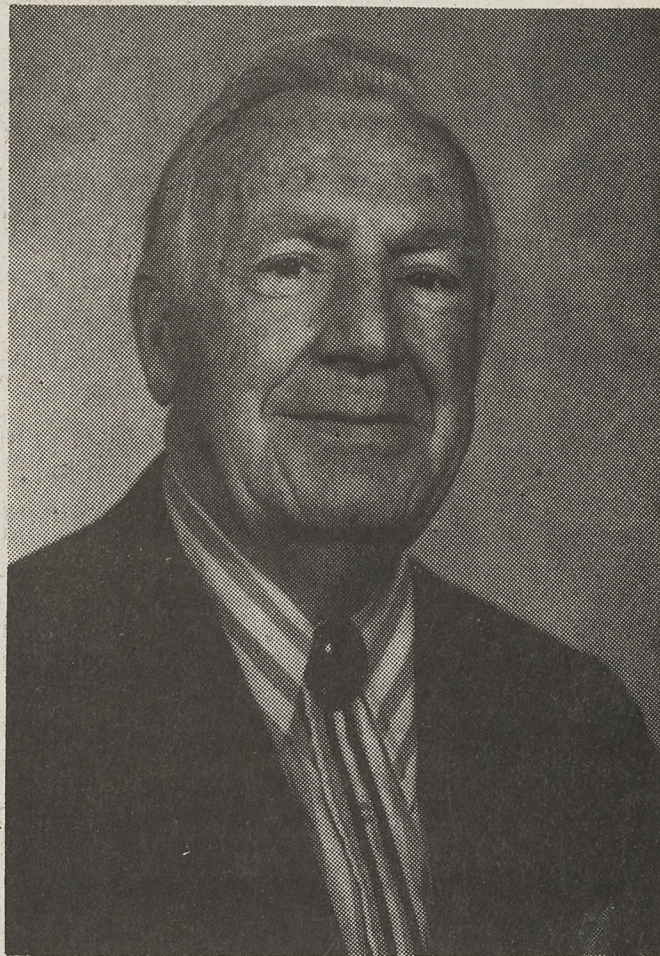

"It is only later, when the boys and girls start to work, that the two religions intertwine. Even so, the Protestant firms tend to give the first choice of jobs to Protestants. Because the majority of firms are Protestant, this only aggravates the hatred."

It is frightening to live and work when violence is just around the corner, and there are fingers on the trigger. Boyd points out the paradox that religion should create love, not hatred.

"The holys of holys have no answer," "but I say it starts with the children."

Boyd paints mostly subjects of nature: beaches and boats, deserts, and richly colored skies. His style is individualistic, leaning toward impressionism, even quasi-abstractism.

Presently, he is writing a version on the life of John Sutter, a name synonymous with gold in early California.

It's time you and your gas furnace started doing things for each other.

Winter's coming. As it always does. And now is the time to check your gas furnace, so you can keep the home fires burning more efficiently.

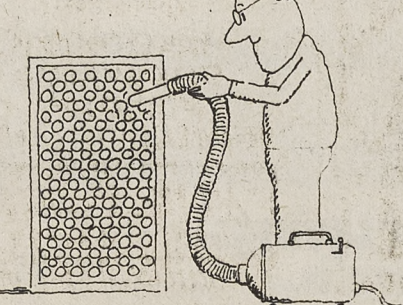

For the most part, the things you should do are simple.

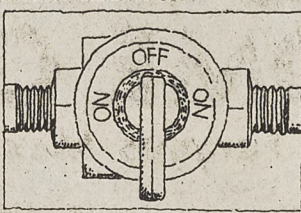

Make sure that the main burner flame is burning blue, not yellow. Otherwise, it may be using more gas, and producing less heat. If you have a wall furnace, see that the area around the air openings and controls are free of lint and dust; if you see accumulations of what appear to be soot, you need the help of an expert.

If you have a central furnace, clean or replace the air filter now, and at least once more during the heating season. A clogged filter wastes energy and increases heating costs.

If the pilot is out, turn the thermostat to the lowest possible setting before relighting, make sure the main burner valve and the pilot valve are turned off and allow a few minutes for the gas to clear. Then check the manufacturer's lightup instructions which appear on most furnaces. Once the pilot is ignited, reset the thermostat to 68° or lower. If you're uneasy about it, call PG&E for assistance.

If your furnace needs parts or repairs, call a qualified furnace repair service. If you smell gas, call us. Never look for a gas leak with a lighted match or other flame. For more information, ask for our booklets, "At Your Service" and "Gas and Electric Safety in Your Home," at your local PG&E office. With just a little loving care, you and your furnace will be ready for a long, warm winter.

South Fremont Boulevard issue

analysis of data has started yet. Traffic counters have been placed across Fremont and on its side streets to determine which streets have how much traffic flow, and to determine the pattern of that flow.

In addition, manual observation of traffic flow is being made at key intersections on Fremont, Kinzel said.

"We're concerned about the pattern of accidents that have occurred in the past on Fremont," he said. "We've analyzed the traffic accident reports for the last few years. We're also concerned about traffic speeds, and the congestion points. We're making surveys of the amount of cars parked on the street, and when they're parked, to give us an idea of on-street parking use.

"We're trying to find out where the problems are, and we're looking for problems that are built into the roadway, to be able to correct those problems. There's been a problem with pedestrian crossings, and we're looking into where these problems are most frequently occurring, as well as where children cross the street.

"We're also interested in changes in land use that affect traffic," Kinzel said. "We're looking at traffic signalization needs, and at visual improvements to the street."

Clyde Lafitte, a realtor with offices at 1242 Fremont, said: "If you have in mind doing what you did with the north end, I'm going to fight it. It's stopped a lot of property there. And if you have any idea of channelization of Fremont, like the north end, I'm going to fight it."

Fay S. Knox, owner of Knox and Sons Upholsterers, 1484 Fremont, agreed with Lafitte.

"If you're talking about channelization, I'm going to fight you, too," he said. "I live on the north end of the street. We used to be able to get in and out of there right away. Amador needs a stop light, and near Ray's Department Store, there's a need for a stop light. And the Bank of America drive-in teller parking causes more accidents than anything else on Fremont."

Robert B. Prunty, owner of Mat's Electronics Supply Co., 1486 Fremont, asked that the needs of the small merchants on the south side of Broadway and Fremont not be forgotten.

"A lot of little business people depend on the parking along Fremont for the livelihood," he said. "When our rents go up, and we don't have the business to support it, what's going to happen? Channelization on the south end is far better for emergency vehicles than on the north end.

"If we channelize this in any way, we're going to destroy the little business people. Why did you go out of town and get a consultant to do this, when Mr. Thoeny (public works director) could have done it, with a few helpers?"

Richard Penrose, owner of the Rexall Pharmacy at 1250 Fremont, explained that merchants became aroused when they received the notice of the traffic inventory, because they didn't want to have the same type of improvements at the south end of Fremont as at the north end. A petition was got up and circulated, to give the merchants a voice, he said.

"The basic concern was to slow the traffic to 25 m.p.h.," he said. "And we need two street lights—one at Amador, and the other in the Hilby area. We need to work on the parking situation, whether we have diagonal parking, a parking district, or whatever. The merchants are dead set against putting anything in the middle of the street, and they'll fight it, tooth and nail."

Roger Erickson, a dentist with home and offices at 775 Kimball Ave., said a stop sign is needed at Kimball and Fremont, and pointed out the difficulties that pedestrians face in crossing south Fremont.

"You have to risk your life to get across Fremont," he said. "Safety is a factor, with the junior high school children coming down to get their lunches. And the beautification of Fremont needs to be taken into consideration. We have a problem here somewhat like remodeling an old house. But the esthetics of the area can be improved."

Bill Hellman, owner of Hellman Hardware at 1561 Fremont, agreed that an attractive appearance to the south end of Fremont would be beneficial.

"I agree with the 25 m.p.h. speed limit on Fremont," Hellman said. "This is a business street; there's no need for this to be a high-speed thoroughfare. The left turn problems are at McDonald's and Jack-in-the-Box. I'm in favor of a certain amount of logical beautification, because this is our business district."

Richard Penrose pointed out the apparent contradiction between the city's sign ordinance, which prohibits highway-sized signs along Fremont, and the fact that speed limits and uses of that street would classify it as a highway.

Mayor B.J. Dolan told the merchants that the City of Del Rey Oaks is considering a plan to close several streets adjacent to Fremont to traffic, and to make them pedestrian crossings, which would have a definite impact on traffic patterns on south Fremont.

"What can we do to attract additional business to that area, through improvements?" the Mayor asked. "We need your positive input. We'd like to know what you do favor for Fremont."

Dave Cathcart, owner of Aquarian Water Beds, 1424 Fremont, said there's a need for more lighting on Fremont, and he suggested cobalt lights, which would lend an attractive atmosphere. He also suggested the conversion of two-way left turn lanes in the center of the street, to ease traffic congestion.

Kern B. Posey, owner of Posey's Pots and Plants at 1510 Fremont, recommended a "business council" be established to deliberate the future of Fremont, and to make recommendations to the city.

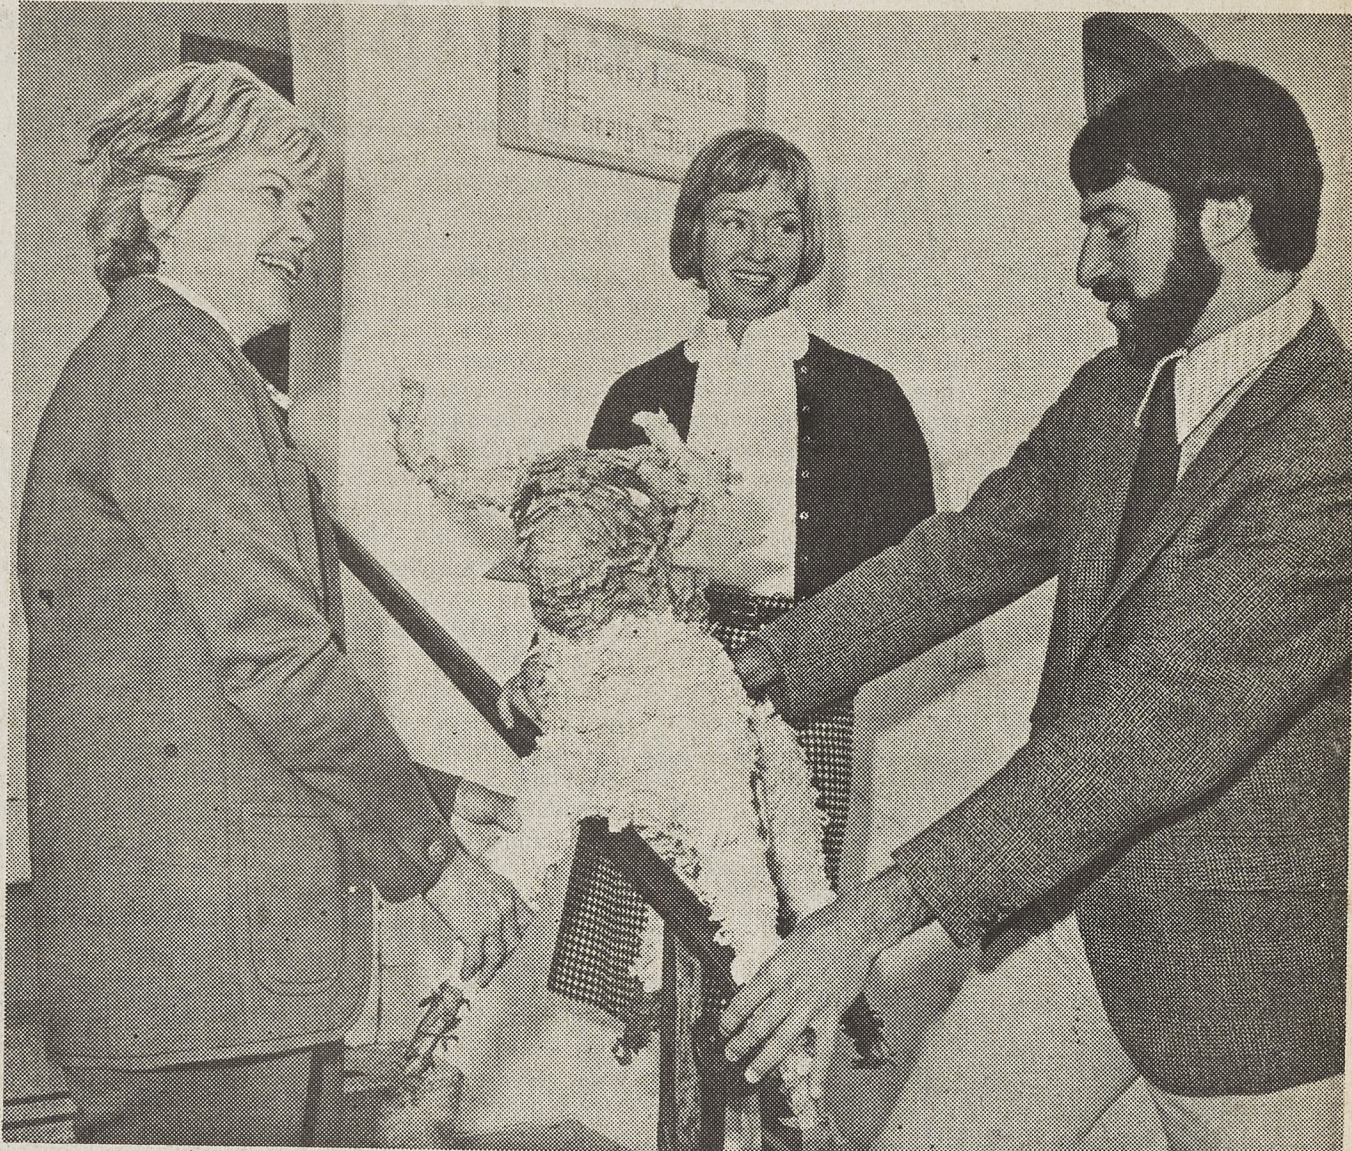

"The north end has created a beautiful divider that gets people by, in a hurry," Posey said. "We need more of a street atmosphere."

Walter Norwick, owner of Walter's men's store at 1884 Fremont, and president of the Seaside Chamber of Commerce, told the Seaside Post the chamber didn't have time to call a study meeting in advance of the public hearing, but that the chamber hopes to come up with some specific suggestions for south Fremont.

Norwick, whose business is located at the north end of Fremont, where channelization and other improvements were made, said part of the negative reaction of businessmen was brought about by the timing of those improvements.

"They started Dec. 10," he recalled. "It just clobbered us at Christmas time. The trucks, and everything else, were just gangbusters! We screamed, that they should have done it in August. The problem is that when you eliminate the left turns and parking, what you're doing is creating a funnel."

Norwick said the engineering of north Fremont has reduced the traffic hazard, but has also had the effect of speeding up traffic.

McIntyre president of Monterey Institute

Stuart Hull McIntyre of Bethesda, Md. has been named president of the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies.

Until the time of this appointment, McIntyre was visiting lecturer in Public and International Affairs and Fellow at the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, Princeton University, and an official of the State Department. In addition to teaching on the graduate and undergraduate level at Princeton, he is writing a book on foreign affairs and serving as the Secretary of a policy review group of the Council on Foreign Relations. McIntyre holds a Ph.D. (1956) and M.A. (1950) degree from Columbia University, New York, and a B.A. degree from Willamette University in Salem, Ore. He also studied law for one year at the College of Law of Willamette University. Entering the United States Diplomatic Service by competitive examination in 1956, McIntyre was appointed by President Eisenhower as a Foreign Service Officer. Serving in the diplomatic corps from that time to the present, he has been principally involved in multilateral aspects of international affairs and European problems. McIntyre was the official in Washington principally responsible for the negotiation of the Washington-Moscow "Hot Line" (1962), and he and the late Ambassador Charles Stelle negotiated the "no bombs in orbit" agreement with the Soviet Union in 1962. The position of President of the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies has remained open since the untimely death, Dec. 14, 1974, of Fulton Freeman, president of the Institute from 1969 to his death.

abuse, emotional abuse, and emotional neglect.

MacPherson will act as the sponsor for the nascent group, and plans to stay on the sidelines once it is functioning, since P.A. is supposed to be run by parents in order to be effective.

"I'll be there because I have experience with groups," he said. "But I'll wait for a parent who is strong enough to take it over and run it, then I'll work with the person who leads the group."

MacPherson said there is now higher incidence of reported child abuse in the country than in previous years, but it is uncertain whether this is because of more child abuse, more reported cases of abuse, or a combination of both.

In 1971, for instance, there were 60,000 reported cases of child abuse in the United States, whereas last year a total of 200,000 cases were reported. Here on the Monterey Peninsula, child abuse is being screened more carefully, MacPherson said.

A new team at Community Hospital now gives every child who comes in a look for evidence of physical abuse, and efforts are being made through the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project to establish programs—such as Parents Anonymous—to deal with abuse problems.

"This is basically a parent self-help group," MacPherson said. "There's no pressure to disclose your experiences, and no names have to be used. A person can come in and drop out any time. It's run sort of like a surrogate family, with the person running it in the role of a parent, and me in the role of grandparent."

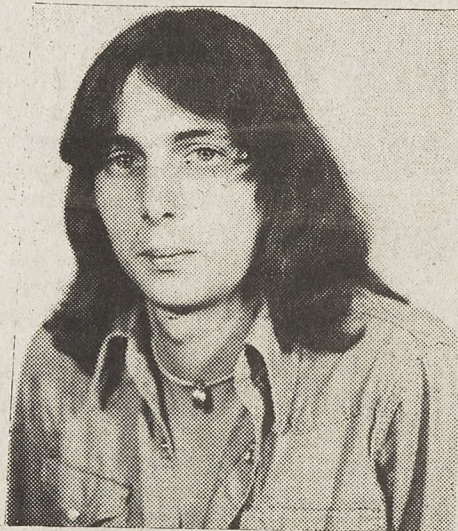

The anonymity factor in Parents Anonymous is what has proven to be largely responsible for its success. Previously, parents were loath to reveal any abuse behavior they might have slipped into for fear of criminal prosecution.

"The person who abuses the child usually has a very low self-

Fall books offer excitement, challenges to youth

By ELLEN KESTER
The month of October is approaching and with it a delightful holiday. Halloween provides an occasion for students, teachers, and families to use their imaginations. In the book,

"Let's Catch a Monster" by Ann Herbert Scott, and illustrated by H. Tom Hall, Martin with his family of sisters and his mother, discuss the possibility of catching a monster this year. Last year it rained, Martin's sister Cookie reminds him. Monsters do not like rain so, of course, Martin doesn't remember seeing any last Halloween.

The holiday includes the school costume parade and Martin wears the ghost costume his big sister Julia has made for him. Another sister, Cookie wears a gypsy costume. Frankie, their neighbor dresses like a pirate, and Martin puts on his cowboy holster and guns underneath his ghost sheet. While all their school friends are at the party in the Community Center, these three search for a monster.

The author of this seasonal treat catches the excitement of her juvenile characters. The dialogue is natural; their trap for the monster is ingenious and child-like in an old pipe out on the playground.

They trap it in a large laundry basket after enticing it out of the pipe with sardines—a monster's favorite food, of course. Martin holds a pillow case over the end of the pipe and, whosh! Within seconds the three hunters are on their way home with their trophy.

"Let's Catch a Monster" will be entertaining for first, second, and third graders. It will also be a delight for younger children when their older brothers and sisters or parents read it to them. The illustrations are especially good.

A good book for boys and girls in the intermediate grades is "Thomas Jefferson, The Making of a President" by John Dos Passos.

It is illustrated by Harve Stein and published by Houghton Mifflin Company. With our Bicentennial celebration in the air, young students have an immediate incentive for studying the lives of our founding fathers. This particular biography of Jefferson emphasizes the influence of his father, Peter who was remarkable in his own right.

A leader, a frontiersman, and a loving parent, Peter got his young son off to a good start on his way towards becoming one of our greatest statesmen. The early home at Shadwell led to Jefferson's personally designed Monticello, the Paris years, the enormous amount of travel between places where he was needed, and finally to his leadership in the writing of the Declaration of Independence.

For the reader, Tom Jefferson is the unusually tall, red-headed youngster, and later the husband, and father, as well as our first Secretary of State, and later our second President. The life of a politician was different in the early days. Jefferson and his contemporaries had a definite sense of the responsibility as well as of the prestige related to their positions. The rivalry among the early leaders is not passed over, however.

What the present-day reader marvels at are the numbers of brilliant leaders at that time. Another key insight which the young reader can gain concerns the perilous plight of our fledgling colonies and 13 states, even after we had won the war against England. The difficulties and challenges facing the statesmen and the uncertain future of their wild experiment are described convincingly by Dos Passos.

A book very suitable for junior high-aged girls is "A Glimpse of Paradise" by Arlene Hale and published by Little, Brown, and Co. High school students will enjoy it, too. It is the story of Heather Robinson's struggle to survive two major crises: her mother's sudden death and her father's mysterious disappearance.

The plot is exciting as Heather vacillates between two and, at times, even, three suitors. But, caught as she is in the position of being both parents to her two younger sisters and one brother, Heather postpones her own happiness and gives herself to keeping their family going. Mysterious phone calls, ugly gossip, her 15-year-old sister Sherrill's rebelliousness, her younger sister's illness, and finally her own job at the jewelry store, almost compound into a sweeping disaster for her.

How Heather's childhood sweetheart Shannon, Bill Wylie, the new young physician in town and Glen, the manager at the jewelry store all respond to her, indicate the complexity of young love. The author tells a "clean" story which is rare today, especially when it is both clean and plausible.

Students sponsor

The Associated Students of Monterey Peninsula College are sponsoring a student housing bureau and are seeking listings.

Homer Cooper, housing bureau coordinator, said the service will be available only to registered MPC students who will be screened before being sent to prospective landlords. Students will be required to give references and to show financial stability.

Cooper said he needs listings that include apartments, houses, room-and-board situations, live-in or work-for-keep arrangements and from persons looking for share-rental situations.

Listings are welcome in all price ranges and can be either furnished or unfurnished, he said.

The housing bureau will not discriminate on the basis of ethnic background, Cooper said.

Landlords who want to use the service will have their listings posted on a bulletin in the college center. Each listing will be coded to prevent direct contact.

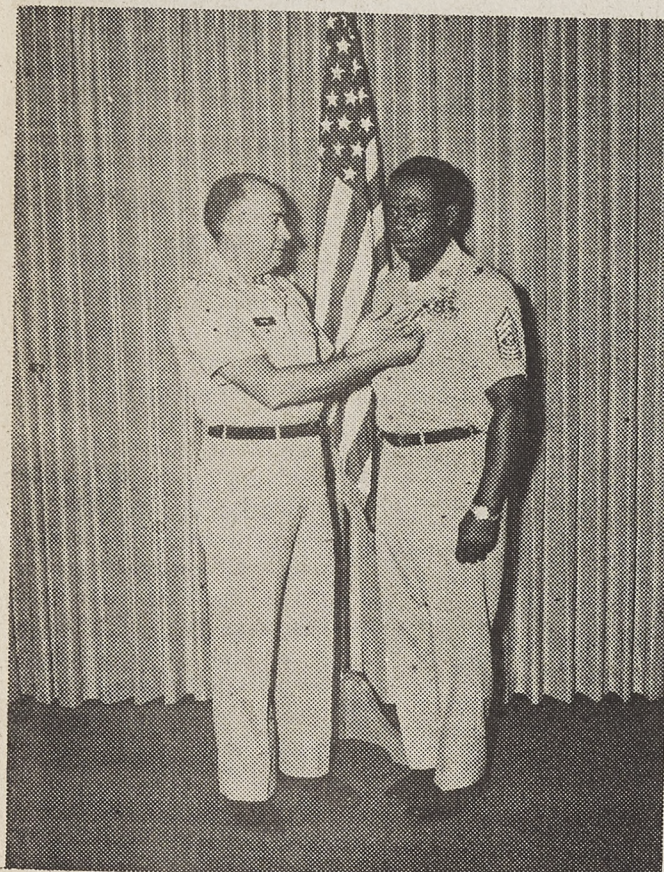

"We're doing this because of the great number of inquiries we get from students needing housing," Cooper explained. "Our hope is to establish a clearing house so that landlords and students can go together."

The housing bureau will have office hours from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and can be contacted by calling the college at 649-1150, ext. 303.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER?

QUESTIONS ABOUT THE ENERGY ISSUE WERE SOLICITED FROM PEOPLE-ON-THE-STREET IN SIX MAJOR CITIES BY GULF OIL CORPORATION. HERE IS ONE OF THE QUESTIONS:

► WHY IS THE PRICE OF GASOLINE SO HIGH?

► ANSWER: It is directly attributable to the worldwide increase in the price of crude oil. Our prices are controlled and the Federal Government has regulated each of the price increases passed through to the consumer. Until we can bring supply and demand into balance and develop energy self-sufficiency, we are going to be dependent on high cost foreign crude oil and the prices at the pump will continue to be high. DO YOU HAVE A QUESTION ON ENERGY? Write to: What's the Answer, Gulf Oil Corporation, P.O. Box 1166, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15230.

Warning issued locally on 'roofing contracts'

Monterey County residents are warned to use extreme caution before entering into any contract with persons selling "roofing jobs," door-to-door, consisting of aluminum asphalt or shingle oil spray.

The Monterey County Consumer Affairs Department has received information that fraudulent roofing contractors have been operating in the Bay Area, and may be headed in this direction.

Any resident who is contacted by persons offering such a job is urged to immediately contact the Monterey County Consumer Affairs Department or your nearest Police or Sheriff's Department.

Before signing any home improvement contract, consumers should:

- Ask to see his contractor's license
- Check with your city business license department
- Check with local, established firms—compare prices, materials and guarantees
- Do not prepay in cash. If the job is a major one, arrange progress payments
- See that city and county building permits are obtained if laws require them.

Organization seeks to help distressed parents

esteem," MacPherson said. "The group atmosphere helps to reinforce the good things about the parents. And there will be crisis help set up through the group for parents, in the home through a telephone number exchange. There will also be a group of volunteers, who are not abusing parents, to transport people, to babysit, and to go out on crisis calls."

The whole thrust of Parents Anonymous is to break up the cycle of child abuse, which can stretch back generations into a family.

"Most abusing parents get almost to a compulsive stage, where they see no alternative to abuse. The group stops that and says to the parent 'You can do this instead.' Most child abusers were abused when they were children. In part, it's something you learn."

There is a line of distinction, though, between the chronic child abuser and the parent who occasionally oversteps the limit in the area of punishment, or in verbal chastisement. These latter types of experiences, say Parents Anonymous, are natural and happen to everyone. Parents Anonymous is concerned more with the habitual and chronic abuser.

"Punishment becomes abuse," MacPherson said "when it's for the parent's needs, rather than for the child's. Most child abuse, for some reason, is with children under five. But the capacity is there in most parents to abuse; however, they are just able to stay away from it."

The standard personality traits associated with child abuse include immaturity, a low self-esteem, excessive desire for attention, and masochistic tendencies. But, as the psychological bromides have it, there are traits within everyone; the question is one of degree, rather than kind.

There's still a feeling that children belong to their parents," MacPherson said, which is one reason it's taken so long before anything positive in the area of remedying child abuse has transpired. This attitude also explains the reluctance of law enforcement and judicial agencies from stepping into the picture, except in the most obvious of cases.

The chapter of Parents Anonymous being created here on Monterey Peninsula will be the only one in this county, although MacPherson said there is still a great need.

MacPherson was led into his work with Parents Anonymous through his interest in youth counseling at Aquarian House. That work, in turn, had its genesis in work he did with autistic children—those severely disturbed youngsters who exhibit a form of personality disorder most closely resembling exaggerated schizophrenia.

"I worked with autistic and schizophrenic children, and I decided I wanted to do something to help at the other end," MacPherson said. "The other end," obviously, is the early years of life, when behavioral patterns are set, and personalities and minds are being formed by the home and environment.

MacPherson believes child abuse "can lead to serious problems, not just for the abused child, but for the other kids, too," and that the prevention of child abuse can also save society money, as well as lives, by preventive psychology. The elimination or control of child abuse, he believes, should reduce costs for law enforcement, court systems, probation, and the welfare system by producing healthier, better adjusted individuals.

Any parent interested in learning more about Parents Anonymous, or interested in attending one of the meetings, should contact Michael MacPherson at 373-4773.
